EDITORIAL REQUIREMENTS

The following information is intended as a guide for contributions to The Journal of Australian Ceramics. Please contact Vicki Grima (Editor) on 0419 250 282 or by email, mail@australianceramics.com, or Bridie Moran (Editorial Assistant) by email, australianceramics@gmail.com if you have additional questions.

Articles may include profiles on ceramicists (yourself or others), reviews of ceramic exhibitions and books, upcoming events, critical reports and commentary, research papers and technical papers. In fact, we welcome any subject of interest to ceramicists, potters and sculptors, galleries and collectors, educational institutions and their students.

The average length of articles is 500–1500 words, and longer articles are always welcome.

Please submit your proposed article by email, Dropbox or WeTransfer. Please retain a copy for yourself.

The editorial policy of The Journal of Australian Ceramics is to allow the author to use his or her own writing style. Minimum editorial interference is exercised except in grammar and spelling. At times, articles may be edited to meet layout requirements and, when possible, the author will be contacted prior to going to print.

You may not publish the PDF without written consent from the Editor.

The editor retains the right to include, or postpone the publication of any article. If you have submitted the article to more than one magazine, please tell us. The Australian Ceramics Association may publish your article in various formats or media, make translations, licence it to third parties such as database aggregators, and collect any fees earned by such use.

All authors are required to sign a Licence to Publish Agreement.

A complimentary copy of the magazine is sent to the artist and author on publication.
